The British Parliament has a pretty plentiful bill of fare presented to it for the passing session; and among the items are a number which promise to be of great utility. Of the forthcoming scheme of Parliamentary reform, (to be brought forward to-night, February 10,) we are not yet called upon to speak; and but for the party struggle to be anticipated from it, and its discussion, we really consider the bill for regulating burial societies of greater importance to the community. The murderous worship of Moloch, under the temptations of these horrid associations, are enough to bring down the judgment of Sodom and Gomorrah upon the country.

The new mercantile marine code, admitting foreigners to a free participation in our coasting trade, is another move of very considerable consequence, and ought to tend to cheapness in very essential branches of trade.

Lord John Russell's bill to modify Parliamentary oaths, or, in other words, to admit Jews to seats in the Legislature, by a side wind, is also a constitutional change of some interest, but certainly of much less now than it ever has been since the children of Israel used to be persecuted and plundered ad lib., by violence or law.

Onening the civil services of the State to Opening the civil services of the State to general competition, so as to abate some of the abuses of favoritism, may also be reckoned a step of significant promise. How the plan can be framed, and how it will act, it is difficult to surmise. The intent, however, is laudable, and it is to be hoped that the working of the machinery may be equal to the desired effect. The charges of corruption against frish members, and the by-blow at King Hudson by Tom Duncombe, will throw some light on transactions such as it is the declared object of this measure to render impracticable hereafter; but ah, benedicite! men are but men, and the act of Parliament was never yet framed, and never will be framed, that could put an end to cordidness, meanness, rascality, bribery, and prostitution. Education will do something; but even education is no certain cure for the depravity of human nature. The millennium is not yet quite at hand; but, nevertheless, it is an excellent thing to go on improving, or trying to improve, though the arguments may smack largely of the sanguine and exaggerated. ning the civil services of the State to

A codification of the statute and common A codification of the statute and common law, it appears, from a discussion in the Lords, is also advancing. It may be thought full time that it should, when we learn, that of between 16,000 and 17,000 statutes, which load the books, or oracles of the law, only 2,500 are operative, or, as the report phrases it, "living acts." Surely, the 14,000 dead ought to be decently buried. If you walked into the vicinity of any of the courts sitting at the present time, and saw the hundreds of lawpresent time, and saw the hundreds of law-yers' clerks hurrying to and fro, every one laden with masses of papers so bulky that they stagger under their weight, a faint idea might be conceived of the enormous burden of legal proceedings in an old law over-ridden and oppressed country. The Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill to establish a Territorial Government for Nebraska.

Mr. Cass addressed the Senate. He preferred the bill as it was originally reported, to its present shape. He deprecated the introduction of the provision repealing the Missouri Compromise, particularly as it was admitted on all sides that its repeal could have no practical effect. Slavery, it was admitted, could not be carried into the Territory, and the repeal of the prohibition was calculated only to revive agitation on the subject. He was unwilling to disturb, for no practical purpose, a deed which was done for a beneficent purpose, and had accomplished its purpose well.

He then addressed the Senate at length upon the sovereignty of the People of the Territories over all political purposes and objects. The power of Congress over Territories was confined exclusively to territory considered as public land, and in that sense was as absolute in the States as in the Territories.

If the Constitution of the United States allowed the People of the South to carry their slaves to the Territories in spite of all local law, under the principle of equality secured by that principle, why did it not allow them to carry slaves into Ohio? If the right was one secured by the Constitution of the United States, the Constitution of Ohio could not set aside the supreme law of the land.

He is still speaking on the subject of slavery.

House of Representatives, Feb. 27, 1854.

There was an unusually full attendance at the opening of the House this morning. As soon as the journal had been read, Mr. Davis, of Indiana, arose and stated that it was known that the Printer of the House had died; and he moved that the House pro-ceed to the election of a Printer, at 2 o'clock P.

Mr. Dean moved to amend this motion, by inserting Wednesday, in lieu of to-morrow.

Mr. Campbell. Why not now?

Mr. Dean said there was no necessity for

Mr. Stanton, of Kentucky, said that in the mean time the House would be without a Printer.

Mr. Dean said that nearly a whole session of the last Congress had passed, before the House had selected its Printer. He thought the House should take time to learn who were its candishould take time to learn who were its candidates and what their positions.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, said, that in his opinion the Printer was no officer of the House, but simply a contractor to do its work; but that if the House was really without such an agent, he thought the election should be held

Mr. Davis differed with Mr. Jones in thi view, and quoted the law under which the Printer is elected, to show that he is as much an officer of the House as its Clerk, or the Speaker himself.

Mr. Washburn, of Maine, said that the Printer was clearly something more than a contractor. A great and delicate trust was reposed in him. His office was not assignable. Such was the understanding, as indicated by the discussion when the late Printer was cho-

Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Booock asked the withdrawal of this motion, to enable him to present a subject to the consideration of the House; which request was complied with.

He then said that his purpose was to present a bill to authorize the construction of six national first class steam-propelled frigates; but that if the House would yield its seent, he that if the House would yield its resent, he would move the suspension of the rules, to enable the House to take up forthwith and pass the Senate bill now on the Speaker's table; and he said that he would pledge himself, should others refrain, not to utter a word in discussion of the bill during its passage. He explained that, without a suspension of the rules, a bill involving an appropriation of money cannot be passed without first going before the Committee of the Whole.

The motion to suspend the rules was then decided in the affirmative—yeas 127, nays 60.

Mr. Bocock here arose and desired to have it clearly understood, whether the rule requiring bills involving the expenditure of money to go to the Committee of the Whole, had been suspended?

The Speaker said, the motion that had been adopted was simply to suspend the rule, to enable the House to take up the bill in question.

Mr. Bocock and others thought this had

Mr. Bocock and others thought this had been embraced in the motion adopted.

The Speaker was clear in his convection that it had not been.

Mr. Bocock then made the further motion to suspend this rule also.

On this motion, the yeas and mays we're called, and the rule was not suspended, the vote being—yeas 98, mays 80—not two-thirds.

Mr. Bocock explained that this bill was identically the same as that already reported favorably upon by the House Committee on Naval Affairs, from whose docket the Senate Committee had obtained it; and that therefore it would not be necessary to refer it to that committee. He accordingly moved its reference to the Committee of the Whole, which was carried; and that it be made the order for Tuesday and Wednesday two weeks hence, which day and Wednesday also prevailed.

Mr. Gallegos, the Delegate from New Mexico, presented a resolution instructing the Committee on Military Affairs to make certain inmittee on Military Affairs to make certain inmittee on Military Affairs to make certain in-quiries into the expenses of the military gov-ernment of New Mexico.

Mr. Miller, of Missouri, stated that the re-port and resolution submitted by the Commit-tee on Elections, in favor of the claims of Mr. Gallegos, of New Mexico, to his seat, were adopted without sufficient examination. Gen. Lane had no notification of that proceeding, and had had no opportunity of being heard upon this floor. He moved to suspend the rules, in order to take up the resolution.

upon this floor. He moved to suspend the rules, in order to take up the resolution.

Mr. Stanton, of Kentucky, of the Committee of Elections defended the action of the committee, and of the House. He stated that the subject had been before that committee for two months, and that the amplest opportunity had been given to both parties to present their claims.

Messre. Miller, Stanton of Kentucky, Richardson, Haven, and Stanton of Tennessee, when the motion to suspend the rule was decided by yeas and nays in the negative. So the previous determination of the House stands sus-

BACON'S MERCANTULE COLLEGE,

Northwest corner of Sixth and Walnut streets

Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE undersigned has removed his Mercantile College to his new building, northwest corner of Walnut and Sixth streets, where he has fitted up a splendid suite of rooms, expressly for his business—having spared neither pains nor expense in making them in every respect the most convenient and pleasant school rooms in the United States.

The plan adopted in teaching combines practice with theory; instead of using books, the pupils are exercised in making original entries of every-day business transactions. Journalizing, posting, balancing accounts, opening and closing of a great variety of different sets of books, both for partnership and individual business, where the business has been prosperous and adverse; and thus qualifying the student for entering into the practical duties of the accountant, in any kind of business.

The course of instruction will consist of Double-entry Book-keeping, embracing every department of trade and mercantile accounts, vix: Wholesale, Retail, Commission, Exchange, Banking, Manufacturing, Shipping, Individual, Partnership, Steamboating, and Compound Co. Business. Commercial Calculations, Practical Penmanship, and Lectures on Commercial Law; also, Lectures on the Science of Accounts, Custom of Merchants, etc.

In addition to the regular course of study, the undersigned has made arrangements with Henry Snow, Esq., Hon. Bellamy Storer, Prof. C. W. Wright, and other eminent lecturers, to deliver a course of Lectures on the subjects of Commercial Law, History of Commerce, Political Economy as connected with commerce, and other subjects of great importance in a commercial point of view, and never before introduced in any Mercantile College in the United States.

Pupils are instructed individually, and not in classes; so that students may enter at any time, and proceed in the ratio of their capacity and assiduity.

Public examinations are had, (though pupils are examined privately, if they desire i

Mr. Bacon's school is in a flourishing condition, and the patronage extended it is a high compliment to the thorough mercantile education there imparted.

From the Chillicothe Ancient Metropolis of May 8, 1853.

Mr. Bacon is unrivalled as a teacher—a diploma from his College, in Cincinnati, is required as a sine qua non in obtaining situations in the best mercantile houses in large cities.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, Nov. 8, 1853.

Mr. Bacon has constructed the upper portion of his building expressly for the purposes of his College, and, without any doubt, it is the most complete arrangement of the kind in the United States.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

This whole institution is undoubtedly the most elegant and finished establishment, for its purposes, in the world.

Mr. Washburn, of Maine, said that the Printer was clearly something more than a contractor. A great and delicate trust was reposed in him. His office was not assignable. Such was the understanding, as indicated by the discussion when the late Printer was chosen.

Mr. Davis said the House certainly did not elect the establishment, but the person. An individual was chosen Printer.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, moved that the subject be laid upon the table; which motion was negatived.

The previous question was then ordered, and the amendment fixing upon Wednesday was adopted, and the motion of Mr. Davis then prevailed. So that a Printer for the House will be elected on the day above-named, at two o'clock P. M.

Mr. Dawson moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole. PEOPLE'S PRIENT OFFICE, 86 Nassau st., N. York.

Splendidly Illustrated!

I EADLEY'S WASHINGTON.—The commencein ment of the Life of General George Washington in Graham's Magazine, has given an impulse to the work, in the way of new subscribers, for which we were searcely prepared, although we anticipated a popularity and sale, from this feature, greater than from any other single series of papers that had ever before appeared in this Magazine.

"The Father of his Country" is embalmed in the hearts of the people, and the rising generation will have their memories stored with fact and illustration, in relation to his character, by Headley, so that Washington's "memory will be kept green" in tens of thousands of American households, and each chapter of the work, as it appears monthly in Graham hereafter, will be looked for with an avidity far greater than that which has been manifested for "Abbott's Life of Napoleon." How much better and more worthy Headley's theme is, we need not tell to the American public.

The work is copyrighted, and cannot appear elsewhere. It is elegantly illustrated with drawings and ongravings, by the first artists. The March part is also illustrated by a splendid steel engraving of "Washington prior to the Revolution," from an accredited portrait in the possession of the Custis family. The illustrations alone for this work will cost the publishers of "Graham" over $5,000—a sum they very cheerfully spend for the very liberal class of the public which sustains this time-honored American monthly, which, through all changes in others, and all competition, fair or foul, keeps its proud position at the very head of one own literature; at once

TO THE CONSUMERS OF DRY GOODS. Who Se ek their Supplies in our Market.

O'NE PRICE ONLY. We are now in our NEW STORE, we tie was erected expressly for us. We think it the most comfortable and best lighted storogom in the city; and with increased room, facilities, and experience, de emed quite ample, we shall deal largely in FORFIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS.

FORF.16N AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS, of every style, all of the best qualities, and for which we shall have one price only.

We shall sell cheaper t han we ever have done; and in having one price only '(which, in our opinion, is the only fair and equitable way of doing business) we shall maintain our self-respicet, which is above all price or success. Moreover, we expect to retain all the trade of those prompt cus, omers who have made the sir purchases of us for some years past, and doubtle is we shall have a large access, on of new customers, who prefer to buy where one fair price only is asked, who prefer to buy where one fair price only is asked, we feel that our simple word is requisite only to satisfy our former customers that the one price system is the correct one, and to the radvantage; and we do not hesitate to assert our belief that all candid and intolligent persons will, after an impartial examination of prices, fabric, and styles, give a one price store the preference. Those who are not judges of goods cannot fail to be impressed at once with the manifold and vast advantages to the purchaser resulting from the adoption in good fauth of the one price system? It in necessarily insures low prices to the purchaser, i or it becomes absolutely necessary to meet at the start; all competition that can be offered in prices.

Our scale, of prices will be so low, and the profits so prices.

Our scale of prices will be so low, and the profits so small, that we cannot and will not sell but for the cash, or to et istomers who pay promptly. For those who purchase very largely, or to sell again, reductions will be made.

The public are cordially and most respectfully invited to call at all times and examine our stock.

From the United States Argus. From the United States Argus.

To those persons who may visit Washington, and are in want of a boot that cannot be excelled, either in quality or workmaship, we would call their attention to the card of Henry Janney, to be found under the head of "Washington." A handsome and neatly-made boot is not at all times a source of pleasure to the wearer, but often one of extreme torture; this is caused by the bungling manner in which the boot is fitted to the foot. Mr. Janney has devoted mach of his time in studying the construction of the human foot, in order to ascertain how a boot should be cut and fitted, that will be perfectly easy to all parts of the foot. In this he has succeeded, so that it matters not what may be the shape of, or the number of corns on the foot, his boot is perfectly easy. Thus he has combined beauty with comfort.
